No shelter
By Rev. Rick Reynolds

We’ve been saying this for over 20 years: There isn’t enough shelter in Seattle. It’s getting worse, and it has been getting worse for a long time.

Rents are sky high. There are now more than 10 homeless camps and tiny house communities in Seattle/King County. And in every neighborhood we see tents and garbage and chaos.

Thursday night I got back from visiting one of those camps. It was nearly midnight. Nightwatch had filled up the shelter beds and gave blankets to the last half-dozen guys who came to us seeking help. There were no shelter options.

One of the guys forced to sleep outside was old. He hunkered down right in front of Nightwatch. “I can’t take another step” he told me. With a groan, he rolled up his blanket on the sidewalk, just outside our doors. We couldn’t do anything for him, and we couldn’t get him to move.

The next morning he was gone. I checked our records to see how old he was. His birthday is the day after mine. He will be 64 this spring.

Those old bones should not have to sleep on concrete, fully exposed to the weather. We need to do better, and quickly. Thank you for your generous support, supplying shelter, and failing that, keeping people alive for the night.

Lord, you have been our resting place for generations. Who else can we turn to in our time of need? Hear the cry of the homeless in our city, and act quickly.

What I learn from our seniors
By Marlene Poland, Housing Coordinator

I’ve been working with the seniors at Nightwatch for six months. I’m getting more out of it than they are! They have so much to teach us.

From a very young age, I was taught that seniors are to be cherished, respected and honored for their wisdom in the world.

Each morning I make my rounds, getting a chance to talk with the tenants. We talk about life. They tell me stories of strength and hope. They have taught me that even in the worst of times, a simple smile or a listening ear can make worries fly away.

Senior Housing at Operation Nightwatch is more than just a place for our seniors to live. We are a community for each other. We are a safe refuge. This is home, where they hold the keys; and not just the keys to their front door. Here, they hold the keys to a richer life.

The rent that the seniors pay is about half the cost of the program and utilities and maintenance. For all our seniors, let me say “Thank you” for making this senior housing possible, through your ongoing support of our work.

Bad news?
By Ann Sakaguchi

No one likes to receive bad news.
No matter how gentle and kind the messenger, it is still bad news. The content of the news overwhelms the kindness and good intentions. In the end, it is just bad news.

And so it was with Nightwatch recently.

Nightwatch has been a partner in providing shelter for 75 men every night, rain or shine, at the Pearl Warren Building since the end of 2014. By partner, I mean we pay money (which we receive from you) to the Compass Housing Alliance. They pay workers to watch over our homeless guests at night.

Maybe you’ve heard that the City of Seattle plans to open a new place to serve homeless people, called the Navigation Center. This is a good thing. The center will serve up to 75 people, particularly those who cannot be helped in other shelter situations. It will be a place to stay, 24 hours, and to get help in many ways.

It is a good plan, but the Pearl Warren Building has been selected to be the new Navigation Center. This means that our humble shelter for 75 men is being displaced. Our 75 men are being replaced by a different group of 75 homeless people. We have to go somewhere else.

We don’t know yet when we have to go. We don’t know what will become of our people.

But we are people of faith. Bad news is just another opportunity to watch God work.

Please pray with us. We need your support now, more than ever.

Lord, show us the way. We look to you for guidance through these dark days of uncertainty.
